What the world leaders and global community think:

"We continue to urge Russia to abide by the Geneva agreement and to pull back all its troops along the Ukrainian border in favor of diplomacy and dialogue," - US Defence Secretary Chuck Hagel

"Japan expresses serious concern that Russian moves to violate Ukraine's sovereignty and territorial integrity, including the annexation of Crimea, are continuing," - Japanese Foreign Minister Fumio Kishida

"It's not an accident that you have some of the same people identified who were in Crimea and in Georgia and who are now in east Ukraine...This is insulting to everybody's intelligence, let alone to our notions about how we ought to be behaving in the 21st century. It's thuggism, it's rogue state-ism. It's the worst order of behavior." - US Secretary of State John Kerry

Danylo Lubkivsky during the visit to the USA:
Ukraine Calls on US and Europe to Harden Sanctions against Russia

- There are moments in the history of every nation when you have to defend your motherland, your country and your independence.
- Yes, we have the information that we are in danger. That's why we call on Russian authorities to explain for what reasons they keep so many troops along our border and we do hope that common sense and strong international position that Ukraine enjoys, and is grateful for, will calm down the aggressor.
- Ukraine called for the U.S. and European Union to impose broad sectoral sanctions on Russia "as quickly as possible" in response to what Kiev says are the Kremlin's escalating efforts to destabilize eastern Ukraine.
- Ukraine's government needs increased military support from the West, including arms, to defend itself against Moscow's aggression.
- Ukraine is definitely interested in getting all possible means to protect its people.
- Ukraine expects to begin receiving financial aid from the International Monetary Fund, the U.S. and Europe within the next few days.
- Russia does not fulfill its obligations.
- Russia exports terrorism.

The Head of the Jewish Community of Ukraine Josef Zissels Speaks Out Against Putin

...Russia is worried that Ukraine will become a successful European country, and that could become an example for Russia. They're worried that Russia itself could collapse if Ukraine were successfully integrated into Europe and the West...

... Russia has created instability in eastern Ukraine in order to make Ukraine preoccupied with these problems, rather than occupying itself with integration into Europe...

... The first thing would have been to take an absolutely firm position against the Russian aggression—though not, of course, to engage in warfare. The economic sanctions should be more effective. Sanctions should affect not only those in Putin's immediate circle, but all Russians, because 80 percent of the population of Russia supports this revanchist, aggressive activity...
